PATH TO PRO

Building a Path to Pro

PATH TO PRO

Talking Points:

- The Home Depot Foundation’s skilled trades training program, Path to Pro, aims to address the growing skilled labor shortage in the U.S.
 - For every five plumbers or electricians who retire, there are only two skilled tradespeople to take their place.
- Through our trades-focused partnerships, Path to Pro seeks to train the next generation of skilled tradespeople to ensure we’re both filling this gap now and developing a robust labor pipeline to keep up in the years to come.
- The Foundation’s nonprofit partners offer hands-on training, pre-apprenticeship certification (PACT) curriculum, scholarships and entrepreneurship programming to youth, high school students, career changers, underserved communities and separating U.S. military and their families.

Key Stats:

- In the U.S., there are more than 300,000 open jobs requiring skilled plumbers, carpenters, electricians and HVAC specialists.
- Over the next decade, this deficit is set to expand to 4.1 million job openings as 41% of the current construction workforce is set to retire by 2031.
- The Home Depot Foundation has committed $50 million to skilled trades training through Path to Pro, and since 2018, the program has:
 - Introduced nearly 600,000 individuals to skilled trades professions.
 - Certified more than 70,000 participants and provided nearly 1,000 scholarships through partnerships with Home Builders Institute, Construction Ready, SkillPointe Foundation, Folds of Honor and more.

Soundbites

Careers in the skilled construction trades are not only remarkably resilient to automation – AI is not going to replace your roof or sewer line – but also offer a direct pathway to financial stability and entrepreneurship.”

With college tuition costs continuing to skyrocket, the Path to Pro program offers opportunities to secure training at no cost to the individual and to pursue trade school, where skilled trades programs cost a third of a traditional four-year degree.”
